Fright night 2 soundtrack

Edit Fright Night Part 2 (1988) Come To Me Composed and written by Brad Fiedel performed by Deborah Holland Dressed in Red Played by Leslie Lewis Louie, Louie Written and performed by Richard Berry Marvel Age Played by Ross Levinson You Could It Up Written and performed by T Bone Burnett Brandenburg Concerto No. 4 in G major BWV 1049 - 1. Allegro Composer by Johann Sebastian Bach Buy Movie: Buy Movie: The music of Fright Night has seen numerous releases around the world in official and pirated formats. Although an instrumental version of Brad Fiedel's Come to Me was featured throughout the film, the album version includes words sung by Fiedel. Instrumental versions were later released on the CD with Fiedel's score (see below) and an alternate version of Deborah Holland, which includes an additional verse, is featured during the final credits of Fright Night Part 2. ReleasesEdit The soundtrack album was released on LP and in 1985 by Private-I Records (a subsidiary of Columbia Records, now owned by Sony Music), but was never officially released on mp3. An officially pressed American CD is accused of existing (which would have been produced during the era of CD longboxes), but if that happens, copies are extremely sparse and it is difficult to discern from the numerous boot legs. The legitimate outage and overwhelming fan demand resulted in a myriad of bootlegs, including burned cd-rs and seemingly professionally pressed compact discs. In 2016, the album was re-released on vinyl in a variety of limited editions by Night Fever Records. This version includes a different mix of Night Armies. 1985 Vinyl RecordEdit The original vinyl releases around the world are mostly the same, adorned with poster art on the front and four photos and credits on the back. The Japanese version was released with an obi strip and a black and white insert folded with photos and text. The COVERS of the US and UK swerve slightly - the songs/artists are formatted in two columns in front of the American release and listed at the bottom of the British ribbon, with the artwork cut differently at each release. 2016 Vinyl EditionsEdit On March 25, 2016, the album was re-released by Night Fever Music. Remastered the original tapes, the company seemingly unknowingly ended the mix of extended films from Armies of the Night, which lasts almost a minute longer and was unheard of. Pressed on vinyl 180 grams, they released the album in four different editions of limited collector: Blue Glow-in-the-Dark (limited to 200), 200), White Splatter (500), Blue White Evil Fog (2,000) and an image disc with poster art. In 1986, Sparks released a new recording of The Armies of the Night on his album Music That You Can Dance To. Running about four seconds longer than the cut on the soundtrack, some lyrics are omitted and the orchestrations stray a lot. In some releases of the album, the song aptly titled Change replaces Armies of the Night. This version of the song was also included on the French compilation The Hell Collection. In 2014, three mixes of Give It Up were included as bonus tracks on disc 2 of Evelyn Champagne King's remastered album, A Long Time Coming (A Change Is Going To Come). These include version 7 (3:52), Killer Dance Mix (5:48) and Dub Mix (4:20). Issued in CD and MP3 formats. Devo's song Let's Talk was included on the 2000 compilation album Pioneers Who Got Scalped: The Anthology. Ian Hunter's Good Man in a Bad Time was included in his 1996 2-disc anthology Once Bitten Twice Shy. Released on CD and mp3. Rock Myself to Sleep was included on April Wine's 1985 album Walking Through Fire. It was later included on the 1992 compilation over 60 Minutes with April Wine: The Hits, as well as on the 4-CD set of The April Wine Collection. White Sister's Save Me Tonight was included on her 1986 album Passion by Fashion, which was released in mp3 format. Music videosEdit Fright NightEdit In 1985, the J. Geils Band produced a promotional music video for the title song that used many clips from the film and received small airplay on MTV - the band split up shortly after being filmed. The best quality version of this outstanding clip appears in the Spooky Videos DVD collection, Volume 2, which was released by Promo Only, a company that exclusively serves D.J.'s professionals and Professional V.J.'s. A low-quality copy (with an on-screen obtrusive time code) and a rare backstage featurette appear in the original EPK (Electronic Press Kit) that was included in the 30-year-old blu-ray edition. J. Geils Band - Fright Night Music Video April Wine released a music video for the single Rock Myself to Sleep. this video is not a tie-in tie-in Fright Night instead focuses on a spoiled rich girl who rips her clothes off and dances around the living room watching April Wine perform the music on laserdisc. April Wine - Rock Myself To Sleep Official Video Although there has not been an official music video for White Sister's Save Me Tonight, several live versions have been in circulation. A performance in Nottingham, England, was included on the DVD of the band Straight From The Heart: Live At Firefest 2008. This version is slower and includes a different introduction and another. The band returned to Firefest the following year and their very different performance was captured by a fan and uploaded to You Tube. White Sister - Save Me Tonight.Live. White Sister - Save me tonight In 2011, Intrada Records officially released the score on CD. Unfortunately, some of the main tapes were gone, so some of the songs were transferred from low-quality tapes. The 2011 Twilight Time Blu-ray limited edition also included the full isolated score. A pirated CD that included Brad Fiedel's partial score for the film first came to light in Japan in 2000, and this low-quality version was the source of numerous discs to follow. In addition to the mandatory CD-Rs available on eBay and Offer, there are many compact discs that seem to have been professionally pressed and packaged, often denoted as limited editions or collectors, in an effort to mislead fans. The Final CutEdit Perhaps the most notable bootlegs were offered by The Inferno Music Vault, a blog dedicated to making rare and unreleased movie soundtracks available for free for fans to download. The site first offered a soundtrack and score of 28 tracks in 2008; in 2011 they released a multi-downloaded verstion subtitled The Final Cut that included the soundtrack, isolated score (raised from Blu-Ray), rare bonus tracks and audio commentary with the cast and crew. Some fans think that this version of the score is superior to the official release of the intrada CD. In addition to being available in The Inferno Music Vault, the files have been re-shared in torrents, and smugglers are known to sell copies on eBay and i-offer. Numerous variations of the work have been created and included with the original downloads and so, because smugglers can mix-n-match, instantly identify this bootleg can be a complicated.
